For the transgendered, things are more complicated. We should not be judged if we are doing what we think best according to our perceptions at any given time.

Heaven is within us, always reachable. But then when they are unable to pay for their inevitable health-care, they pass their health care costs onto those of us who. The stakes are far, far too high.

I know of many folks who do not fit well into the mainstream binary gender roles. Over abortion it is legal and that is the way it should be in an evolved advanced society. Similarly, some note should be made of the potentially negative aspects of the discrete modernist body, namely the way in which, as a discourse, it locates responsibility for the body with the individual, rather than with socio-cultural factors.
