And Eustace receives a letter that his land will be taken away in a matter of weeks for failing to pay taxes. The publication sent journalist Bill Heavey out into the Alaskan wilderness-- during winter-- in order to spend three days with Marty for the story. Harrison lives in a small cottage at the mouth of a valley. The website and online community "Off Grid" has never been shy about calling out TV shows that it believes misrepresent living off the land. Logger turned Mountain Man, Charlie Tucker's luck takes a turn for the worse in the sub-zero North Maine Woods as a rookie mistake nearly costs him . Marty rushes to make the most of an extra pair of hands. Winter's sun even arrives. A discussion about the show on the Off-Grid website mentioned Eustace Conway routinely driving to town and attempting to pass off a Lyman rifle as a weapon he made. His official Mountain Men bio even mentions Eustace Conway relying on a grassroots lumber operation to "secure his financial future.
