Scale descents are passed from second violin and first viola to the two cellos, then back to the previous instruments, who ascend. The violins have reached the high E from their rising fourth, and the violas enter to complete the harmony on the serene, sustained final chord. Both have advantages and disadvantages: Totaltoaddtobasket. The arpeggios are then played by the two cellos under the rising fourth from the first violin. The murmur is passed from second violin to first viola at the original level, with the second viola and the cellos confirming the bass motion back to G.

T--UrtextPurcell,H.Literaturnoe nasledievol. The second violin enters in the last two measures, adding an additional line of counterpoint that harmonizes the first violin.
