Patricia Malcolmson is a historian and a former executive in the Ontario public service. The poor lady goes into post natal depression her illness is not given a name in the book Her husband has to find someone to look after the baby and take his wife to a hospital in Lancaster and sign her in.
Nella wrote more than a million words in this four year period alone, eventually this selection from her post-war diaries made me sad, as if I was reading a letter from a friend going through a bad patch. For those interested in social history, this provides a wealth of authentic detail; others may find it over-long.
