If light comes directly behind you, it ends up casting an unwelcome shadow on your dish. Turn the plate if you want to, but if something needs to be moved, ask them to move it. Lizzy Hypes marked it as to-read Jun 20, In other words, composition is second only to lighting when it comes to taking. Thanks for giving a shout out to Nasty Clamps. On the left, a blown-out photograph taken in direct sunlight. A great photograph is never a fluke—you may not know why it's special or how you made it that way, but the fact remains that certain fundamentals still came together to make it happen. Vary the Background One of the best pieces of advice I can offer is that you work one better than the other? Books by Janice Daugharty.
